

ABSTRACT

When data detected by an encoder is transmitted/received in predetermined cycles in a measuring device using a sampling control system for controlling a position or a speed at 5 predetermined time intervals, positional data is divided so as to be output with deviation data output each time. The divided positional data are reconstituted so as to transmit the positional data within a control cycle.